ship 'Nouveau Caboteur' was cast on the shore in the Bay of Zurriola, San Sebastian, during a gale of wind. The sea at the time was running so heavily that no boat would venture to put off. There was also a general belief that it was impossible for a boat to be of any service. At this crisis, the British Vice-Consul at San Sebastian, Mr. Edward Bernard March, after unsuccessfully entreating some of the bystanders to accompany him, plunged into the sea, swam through the breakers at the risk of being dashed against the rocks, and succeeded in bringing a rope to the land. It was then secured, and one of the crew came safely to shore along it. The second, however (a lad), lost his hold, dropped into the sea, and sank. Then Mr. E. B. March, at the greatest possible risk, again swam to the vessel, dived near her keel, recovered the lad in a half-insensible condition, and brought him safe to shore. The remainder of the crew, four in number, got safely to land."
